6. What was the key technological distinction of the Gavilan SC in 1983? a) It was the first portable computer with a GUI b) It was the first to use MS-DOS c) It was the first with a flip form factor marketed as a "laptop" d) It was the first to use integrated circuits

Hello!

According to historical records, the correct answer is:

c) It was the first with a flip form factor marketed as a "laptop"

The Gavilan SC, released in 1983, was indeed the first laptop computer to market itself as such. Its innovative design featured a flip-up screen and keyboard, making it portable and easy to use on-the-go.
